PART I – CERTIFICATION

1. We certify that this outline is in a form suitable for publication on the internet.

PART II - OUTLINE OF ORAL SUBMISSIONS

- 2. In the table that follows, these abbreviations are used:
 - (a) AS refers to the appellants' written submissions filed 30 October 2020;
 - (b) AR refers to the appellants' written submissions in reply filed 17 December 2020.

#	Proposition	Submissions Reference
1	Statement of facts	AS [5]-[11]
2	Clause 24 incorporated into the mortgages	AS [12]
3	Approach of primary judge (Dalton J)	AS [9]-[10]
4	Approach of Gotterson JA in Queensland Court of	AS [11]
	Appeal (Sofronoff P and Morrison JA concurring)
5	Preferable construction of clause 24
5(a)	Contracting out of a statute is not permitted where	AS [21]-[30] those arrangements will defeat or circumvent a statutory purpose or policy according to which rights are conferred in the public interest
5(b)	In order to contract out of a statute effectively, the	AS [16]
	language of the contract must use "strong words"
5(c)	Clause 24, understood according to its objective	AS [15]-[17]
	meaning, does not use words that contract out of the	AR [3]-[6] Limitation Act effectively and, in any event, does not use "strong words" to do so 5(d)	The language of clause 24 is ambiguous and, as such,	AS [19] recourse to the contra proferentem canon is justified, so	AR [9] that the clause should be construed against the interests of the respondents for whose benefit it was inserted 5(e)	The use of the word "defeat" by different judges in	AR [7]
	different matters to describe the effect of the Limitation Act is neither relevant to, nor determinative of, the preferable construction of clause 24
5(f)	The provisions of the Limitation Act do not "defeat"	AS [43]-[45]

APPELLANTS' PRIMARY SUBMISSIONS

	the respondents' rights or remedies; to the contrary, it is	AR [3]-[6] only the appellants' pleading of the limitation defence created by that Act, and the right to plead it conferred upon them, that "defeats" the rights or remedies
5(g)	The respondents' construction of clause 24 that the	AR [3]-[6]
	respondents' pleading of the limitation defence "indirectly" defeats the respondents' rights or remedies should be rejected because the words "direct or indirect" do not appear in the clause and this court should not rewrite it
5(h)	The whole of the language of clause 24 must be	AS [18]
	considered, which includes the concluding words	AR [8]
	"insofar as this can lawfully be done", such that even if the respondents' construction of the preceding words of that clause is accepted, because such contracting out is contrary to the public policy, the clause is not engaged 5(i)	Given that no provision of the Limitation Act could be	AS 13, [65] lawfully contracted out of, the Limitation Act applied according to its terms, and Gotterson JA was wrong to conclude, first, that clause 24 validly contracted out of section 13 of the Limitation Act and, second, that because section 13 thereby did not apply, no time period ran that could expire for the purposes of section 24 of the Limitation Act, so that the respondents' title was not extinguished
6	Verwayen does not supply the answer to this question	AS [20]
	and the obiter statements in that case are not binding 7	The purpose and scheme of the Limitation Act should	AS [31]-[39]
	be understood by reference to its progenitor, the 1623 Jacobean Statute, and, understood in that way, the right to plead limitation defences are conferred on defendants in the public interest, which is directed to achieving the statutory policies identified by McHugh J in Taylor Jacobean Statute, and, understood in that way, the right to plead limitation defences are conferred on defendants in the public interest, which is directed to achieving the

8	The judgment of the Privy Council in East India Cov	AS [52]-[55] Oditchurn Paul stands for the proposition that, despite any agreement to the contrary, a defendant may plead a limitation defence and have judgment entered in its favour, even if this causes the defendant to be in breach of its promise not to do so (and to be liable to that end)
9	Paul is good law for Australia, unless and until this	AR [12]-[15]
	Court chooses to depart from it if it thinks fit to do so, but there are no compelling reasons to do so 10	Even if Paul is not good law for Australia, the	AR [16] proposition for which the appellants contend should be adopted by this court, for sound reasons of policy 11	The respondents' approach should be rejected because	AS [28]
	it would reinstate the mischief that Parliament sought to	AR [16] remedy by enacting Limitation Acts and, in doing so, would render the legislation nugatory
12	At common law, there was no limitation period, and the	AS [32]-[39] successive limitation statutes up to and including the Limitation Act reveal the legislative intention that such limitation periods should be in place 13	Additionally, separate and apart from the public policy	AS [40]-[41] manifested in the Limitation Act itself, clause 24 is contrary to the public policy (in the sense described by Isaacs J in Wilkinson v Osborne) against allowing litigants (or prospective litigants) to arrogate to themselves control over court resources
